NEW QUESTION: 2

Simplified Routing is recommended when:

A. The SteelHead is in the same subnet as the servers or clients.

B. The SteelHead is in a different subnet from the client and servers.

C. The SteelHead is in the same subnet as the clients and servers.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Enabling simplified routing eliminates the need to add static routes when the steelhead appliance is in a different subnet from the client and the server.

Note: Simplified routing changes the process used to select the destination Ethernet address for packet transmitted from in-path interfaces. Simplified routing collects the IP address for the next hop MAC address from each packet it receives to address traffic. With simplified routing, can use either the WAN or LAN-side device as a default gateway. The steelhead appliance learns the right gateway to use by watching where the switch or router sends the traffic, and by associating the next-hop Ethernet addresses with IP addresses.
